1998 PRICE SURVEY

To our members:

Here are the results of our latest price survey. Most of these prices have been sent to us voluntarily by funeral directors in response to a letter of inquiry, while about a dozen were obtained by an in-person request at the funeral home. Inclusion in the list does not imply any endorsement, but is simply a means of keeping you informed. In some cases, prices may have risen since the responses were sent to us. For the names of funeral directors we currently recommend, please call us at (617) 859-7990 or 1-888-666-7990.

Please let us know of your experiences — positive or negative — with any funeral director you encounter, whether or not he/she is on our list. It is only through membership response that we can properly evaluate funeral services in our area.

If you have seen our earlier lists, you will notice that the format for this one is different. We have presented the information in a more concise way and have included more items.

Pages 1-5 list itemized prices for each funeral home by column. Each column is headed with the name of the funeral home, the date on the price list and a reference number. Some funeral homes update their price lists every two or three years while others update them several times each year.

Pages 6-7 list the funeral homes by reference number, so that you can look up the full name and address of any funeral home referred to in the earlier pages.

Pages 8-9 list the funeral homes by community.

The first category of prices listed is “Package Prices” — that is, prices for direct cremation, immediate burial, body donation and forwarding or receiving a body from another funeral home.

The price for “direct cremation” should include the following: local transfer of remains to funeral home; shelter of remains; obtaining necessary permits; washing or disinfecting of remains (not always done, though required by regulation); local transportation of remains to crematory; cremation; medical examiner’s fee ($50, required by state law); and return of cremated remains.

You will notice that most funeral directors omit the actual cost of cremation and the medical examiner’s fee from their price lists. A common excuse for this is that these are not services the funeral director himself provides — but obviously the omission makes his prices look better. If a funeral home on our list offers direct cremation “WITHOUT crematory or M.E. fee,” you may assume that the actual bill will be $250-$300 or more higher than the price listed. In general, whenever you ask a funeral director for the price of direct cremation, be sure to confirm that the crematory charge and the medical examiner's fee are included.

A rigid container of some sort is required for cremation. All funeral homes offer a so-called "alternative container," usually made of cardboard or fiberboard and intended to be consumed in cremation. Its wholesale cost to the funeral director is less than $35 (and if he uses the Newton crematory he gets it for free). Most funeral homes mark it up several hundred percent. A reasonably priced alternative container can be purchased directly from Mt. Auburn crematory in Cambridge.

The terms "container by purchaser" or "casket by purchaser" on our list simply mean that you provide your own. You should feel comfortable asking a funeral director to use a container or casket you have purchased elsewhere. Funeral directors are forbidden by law to charge a "handling fee" to customers who provide their own caskets.

The term "immediate burial" usually (but not always) includes the following: local transfer of remains; shelter of remains; obtaining necessary permits; washing or disinfecting the remains; and local transportation of remains to the cemetery. It does not include cemetery charges, nor the outer burial container that is required by most cemeteries.

The price for body donation should include obtaining necessary permits and removal from place of death to the medical school. We suggest that you confirm this with the medical school and the funeral director to be used. Also ask the medical school what portion of the cost they will pay; medical schools have widely differing policies.

If you do not choose any of the packages, you will want to consult the itemized or "a la carte" prices. You may find our guide to reading a general price list (enclosed) helpful in interpreting these prices. Note that on this portion of the price list you always have to pay the cover charge labeled "Basic Service Charge," also known as the nondeclinable fee.

Under the item called "Limousine," you will see "Miles one way" and "$/mile beyond." There is some variation in the distance that funeral directors will travel (one way) without adding an extra mileage fee. Most will go 20 miles, some farther. The mileage fee also applies to the hearse.
